New Polio Vaccine
Very Encouraging

WASHINGTON, Saturday (Reuters) — The Department of Welfare said today that preliminary reports on the nationwide Salk anti-polio vaccine programme were "very encouraging."

The announcement said "preliminary data now being compiled show that the incidence of polio among about 10 million vaccinated children, most of whom have received only one injection, is running roughly 25 to 50 per cent below the rate among non-vaccinated children in the same age group."

PITTSBURGH, Saturday (Reuters) — Dr. Jonas Salk, discoverer of the polio vaccine, today disclosed plans for testing a more potent vaccine within the next few weeks. He said the tests would be made on children aged from five to eight in some Pittsburgh schools.

Dr. Salk said he wanted to obtain information on anti-body status in all children who were inoculated once or more.

LAW REPORT

The Jerusalem Post
October 2, 1955

In the Supreme Court Sitting as Court of Civil Appeal Before the Deputy President (Justice Cheshin), Justices Silberg and Landau.

Baruch Aaronson, Appellant, v. Gen. Kaplan, 2 Leah Rotner, 8. Bella Davidson, Respondents (Case 4).

Value Clause and Rate of Exchange

The Supreme Court dismissed the application for a judgment of the trial court, which had ruled in favor of the Pet. Aviv District Court, delivered on May 30, 1954 (C.C. 528/54).

The respondents mortgaged their property to the appellant in 1945 for IL. 300. The mortgage was tied to a value clause which the parties had agreed to return the loan plus interest in Israeli pounds at the rate of three dollars for each Israeli pound, the calculation to be based on the official rate of exchange existing at the time the mortgage was discharged.

The mortgage was due to be discharged in September 1953. The question then arose as to what was the official rate of exchange of the dollar, since in 1952 the Government had declared three official rates, viz. 2.80 dollars, 1.80 dollars, and 1 dollar.

There is a value clause very similar to the one contained in the above mortgage in the National Loan Certificates issued by the Jewish Agency. In a case similar to the present, before Justice Witton held that the National Loan Certificates were entitled to benefit from the third rate of exchange, i.e. one dollar for one pound (O.S. 529/52).

Judge Raviv of the Pet. Aviv District Court held that there was no material distinction between the present case and that dealt with by Judge Witton, and that in the present case the low rate of exchange, i.e. 2.80 dollars to the pound, must be regarded as the third rate of exchange. Therefore, the respondents could therefore redeem their mortgage by paying IL. 867, the equivalent of 4,300 dollars reconverted into Israeli pounds at the rate of 2.80.

In the appeal against this decision to the Supreme Court, Mr. Schalit appeared for the appellants.

Appeal dismissed with IL. 300.

Judgment given on September 28, 1955.

TOURISM. — Sir Arthur Morse, Chairman of the British Travel and Holidays Association, said in London yesterday that British tourists could therefore redeem their mortgage by paying IL. 867, the equivalent of 4,300 dollars reconverted into Israeli pounds at the rate of 2.80.

In the appeal against this decision to the Supreme Court, Mr. Schalit appeared for the appellants.

Appeal dismissed with IL. 300.

Dagon Satisfied With Unloading Agreement

Jerusalem Post Bureau

HAIFA Saturday.— "We are satisfied that the working arrangement for unloading bulk grain from ships in the Port arrived at through the good offices of the Deputy Director General of the Merchant Marine Ministry, Mr. E. Kling, accords with our contract with the Government and that none of our rights and obligations have been prejudiced." This statement was released by the management of the U.P.S. Company yesterday, last night, when asked for details on how the claim of the United Port Services Company had been reconciled with Dagon's concessionary rights.

The arrangement safeguards for Dagon the execution by its own employees of all those operations which are not the function of ship unloading and the speediest possible turn-around of ships. The U.P.S. company will carry out such shipboard stevedoring which does not interfere with any of Dagon's operations.

The arrangement assures Dagon the right to operations by Dagon, regardless of the U.P.S. workers' practice of making breaks at midday and between shifts the Dagon management said.

Noise Elimination

Asked about the progress on his endeavours to minimize the humungous noise of which many residents have complained, the management said that it had already solicited the advice of Swiss experts as well as those of the Government. At the suggestion of the Mayor of Haifa, the company had also asked the Technion for assistance and the Institute had appointed a committee of scientists to study the problem.

Threat of Warning Strikes in Haifa

By TED R. LUMKE

HAIFA, Saturday.— Warning strikes to last four and two hours are threatened at the Air Force base at Givatayim, the Consolidated Fisheries here this week according to a decision taken yesterday morning by the Secretary of the Haifa Labour Council. The strikes are to warn the management that certain improvements must be made in their working conditions for certain improvements to be embodied in the new labour contracts.

The demands at Ata include payment of discharge compensation to the families of deceased workers, ten days holidays with pay annually, a full day's pay for overtime and family allowances up to the age of 18 (Ata was paying for children up to 16 only, the council stated).

Mr. Hans Moller, director of Ata, said today that he had not even been informed yet of the warning strike and that he was prepared to do all he can to prevent it.

The demands at the Refineries, where talks on a new labour contract had been going on for two months, referred to work-shops and fares to be provided at the refinery, a separate pension fund and the collection of Histadrut dues from all workers whether members or not, a Labour Council spokesman said. It is understood that the latter demand which in the past had caused much dispute with another oil company is the main bone of contention.

'CARRY OUT YOUR AGREEMENTS'

ON the morning of April 20 I found that I was faced with what I was told was the longest list of scheduled callers in the memory of any member of the executive office staff.

Secretary Morgenthau reported to me on the current situation with regard to the financing of the war, as well as on the many other operations conducted by the Treasury.

Citizen Morgenthau said, wanting "greatly enlarged gold shipments," because of severe inflation.

Great Britain wanted to dispatch a financial mission to the United States immediately after VE-Day to discuss the whole question of financial assistance to the United Kingdom. They were more concerned about their post-war international position than the Secretary told me, than about almost any other subject. France was sending her Finance Minister to discuss the financial side of their reconstruction problems.

The Mexican Finance Minister was asking for assurances that we would continue the stabilization agreement under which they were operating.

Cuba wanted to know whether we had extended our gold sales agreement for another four years.

The Indian Government had requested that we lend them an additional 25 million dollars of silver, although the Secretary pointed out that there was some question as to whether they needed so large a quantity for anti-inflation purposes.

At noon I had an important meeting with our relations with Soviet Russia. Ambassador Harriman had just returned from his post in Moscow, and with Secretary of State Stettinius Under Secretary of State C. G.洋和 Charles E. Bohlen, the Department's Russian expert, he attended the conference in my office.

Russians Needed Help

In Harriman's opinion the Soviet Government had no wish to break with the United States because they needed our help in their reconstruction program. He said that we should stand firm on important issues without running serious risks.

At this point, I stopped Harriman to say that I was not afraid of the Russians and that I intended to be firm. I would be fair, of course, and anyway the Russians needed us more than we needed them.

Harriman replied that there were some questions in Moscow that believed it was a matter of life and death to American business to increase our exports to Russia. I declared that it was ridiculous for the Russians to think this.

Harriman continued that he had judgment, we were faced with a "barbarian invasion of Europe" and that the Soviet control over any foreign country meant not only that their influence would be paramount but also that the Soviet system with its secret police and its extinction of freedom of speech.

Harriman observed that obviously in any international negotiations there is give and take, and we must be firm.

I agreed, saying I understood this and that I would not expect one hundred per cent of what we proposed. But I felt we should be able to get eighty-five per cent.

Harriman then asked whether or not we would be disposed to go ahead with the world organization plan, even if Russia dropped out.

He then asked whether or not we would be disposed to go ahead with the world organization plan, even if Russia dropped out.

Before leaving, Harriman said that he had been told of the reason that made me rush back to Washington, other than to attend the funeral of President Roosevelt, was the fear that you

ROOSEVELT understood that Stalin is breaking his agreements. My answer was that the fact that you could not have had time to catch up with all the recent cables to the Soviet Union was the reason of the war to carry out the Crimean section with regard to the Crimea would not serve to detract from their unity of purpose in post-war collaboration.

It was at 8.30 the next evening that we received the telegram from Secretary Stettinius Ambassador Harriman and Mr. Bohlen (of the State Department) while Mr. Molotov was accompanied by what difficulties or differences might arise with regard to other members of the alliance. The principal Allies who had borne the brunt of the war to carry out the Crimean section with regard to the Crimea would not serve to detract from their unity of purpose in post-war collaboration.

Since Molotov insisted on avoiding the main issue, I said that the three factors would keep the U.S. Government was prepared to carry out loyalty of the agreement reached at Yalta and "asked only that the Soviet Government do the same."

I expressed once more the desire of the U.S. for friendship with Russia but I wanted it clearly understood that this could only be on a basis of mutual observation of agreements and not on the basis of the Soviet Government.

"There was an agreement at Yalta that the international community would be a party to the formation of a new Government of Poland in Warsaw in order to establish a new Government of Poland in Warsaw by means of previous agreements of the Polish Government of Warsaw and those Poland and from abroad."

Molotov asked if he could make a few observations. It tive appropriations were required for any economic measures to be taken by the foreign aid, and I had no hope of getting such measures through Congress unless there was public support for them.

Desire to Cooperate

At the Cinema

SEVEN Brides For Seven Brothers (Mickey, Tel Aviv), is an exhilarating Cine-musical set in the colorful and rugged Oregon territory of 100 years ago. Howard Keel, a backwoodsman, finds himself a wife (Jane Powell) on a rare trip to town and takes her back to his home in the hills six miles lonely brother, which naturally starts them thinking about getting brides too.

The picture, directed with rare skill by Stanley Donen, is a highly successful mixture of humour and sentiment. There is real charm in most of the scenes between the young wife and her rough, cleverly drawn brothers-in-law, aspiring to be "gentlemen" — interlaced with a nice variety of tuneful songs and some of the most original dances (staged by Michael Kidd) we have seen since On The Town. The players act, sing and dance with verve and joy.
